Headline:
Dry at first with sunny spells. Rain later.

Today:
Today starting dry with sunny spells before a band of rain, sometimes heavy, moves in from the west. Clearing to the southeast towards the end of the day, with scattered showers following. Another windy day, especially from late afternoon. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Tonight:
Through this evening and overnight any remaining showers should be confined to the coast, with the rest of the region dry with plenty of clear spells. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Monday:
Monday mostly dry with plenty of sunny spells, though there is a chance of the odd, short lived light shower. The wind will be much lighter than on Sunday. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Early morning rain on Tuesday moving eastwards and clearing by mid-afternoon, leaving a dry day with sunny spells. Wednesday and Thursday continuing dry with sunny spells. Temperatures mostly mild.
